WANTS COMMISSION TO INQUIRE AS TO MAJ. MYER'S SANITY

Sol. L. Meyers, a Nephew, Asks District Court to Have Mental Condition of Local Man Investigated.

A petition has been entered in the district court through Harry C. Miller, an attorney, by Sol L. Meyers of Shreveport, Louisiana, requesting that a commission be appointed to inquire into the sanity of Ernest Meyers. The petitioner, a nephew of the local man, who is said to have been under the care of physicians for the past six months.

The object of the inquiry, which under the state law would be conducted by "one or more" physicians, is to protect the estate. At present no business can be transacted owing to his condition, it is claimed. Major Meyers is one of the oldest residents of this city and had been connected with the wholesale liquor business for many years until his recent retirement. Through his generosity he is said to hold many notes of personal friends for various amounts. The nephews who came here to look after the matter say in their petition that M. Mandell be appointed with him to look after the estate.

Chronic alcoholism is cited as the cause of Mr. Meyers' condition. He is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, and would probably not be received to a public hospital even if pronounced incompetent.

Will Have Railways Show Why They Need Not Grant Low Rate

By Evening Herald Special Wire
Santa Fe, N. M., July 13.—Following the refusal of the railroads to attend a formal conference over demands to consider granting a three-cent passenger rate in this state, the state transportation commission today called a formal hearing on October 1st, at which the railroads will be called upon to show why they should not grant the rate. The railroads are expected to take the fight to the supreme court.

The object of the inquiry, which under the state law would be conducted by "one or more" physicians, is to protect the estate.

COUNSEL FOR ORPET RESUMES ARGUMENT FOR ACCUSED YOUTH

Defends His Own Witnesses, Especially H. J. Carlin and Josephine Davis, Whose Testimony He Says Must be Believed.

By Evening Herald Special Wire
Washington, D. C., July 13.—Resuming his argument for the defense today in the case of William H. Orpet, charged with the murder of Marion Lamberti, Attorney Ralph P. Porter defended the integrity of his own witnesses, particularly H. J. Carlin, the investigator.

The state insisted that Carlin perjured state witnesses to change their testimony. Not one word of proof has been brought against the investigator, Porter said.

The attorney then turned to Josephine Davis, who spent the night with Marion on February 8, the day before the latter's death. At the insistence of state officers Miss Davis said Marion was happy. Never again a threat of suicide and never again

I was angry at Carlin for what he did to Marion, I thought him guilty and wanted to say things that would help him," Josephine said in her testimony.

I talked with my mother and gradually it dawned on me that I had no right to act that way,"

Mr. Porter said that no one could disbelieve the open confession of Josephine. A mere girl, he said, she found that her words had a weight more serious than she had realized. Her feelings in spite had led her into a great storm, the lawyer explained, and she regretted her will of it on the stand.

The first session in the long drawn out trial of Will H. Orpet, former university student charged with the murder of Marion Lamberti in Helm's Woods last February, began to materialize today with the assurance that all pretenses the end of the case would be reached by Saturday night.

As soon as was believed that the jury would begin its deliberations to that time.

No one here seems to believe that the jury is going to do in the case.

The issues have been so confused, it is said that almost any sort of a verdict would not cause much surprise.

What It Means to Get Atmosphere

By PAULINE FREDERICK

WHEN you sit comically in the motion picture theatre and pass judgment on the film before you, you may turn to your companion and remark that the Egyptian atmosphere is good, that the French spirit had been well represented, or that the Italian atmosphere was remarkable.

But has it ever occurred to you that it took a great deal of study and hard work to bring that "atmosphere" before you? Did it ever strike you as being a fact that hours of preparation are undergone in order to perfect a scene which may not take more than one minute in the showing?

I have appeared in Paramount Pictures produced by the Famous Players as "Zaza" and "Bella Donna" and as "Audrey." These are all well-known characters and any attempt to enact them without due careful studying them might prove absolutely fatal to one's interpretation of the roles.

It is not a matter of having the director say, "Now, you are angry." The point is, how would Zaza show her anger; how would Bella Donna act when enraged; what would Audrey do if she lost her temper? They would not all show their emotions in the same manner. The first is a fiery, temperamental French woman, the second a cold, hard-calculating English adventuress and the last an unsophisticated young country girl. Their respective manners of showing their anger would differ as widely as does day light from darkness.

One must study these myriad types with infinite care in order to differentiate between them. People of different dispositions and of different nationalities have various ways of expressing the same basic emotion. It is the person who can catch these finer shades of expression who makes the most striking success of character work.

The Coming Baby! Hooray! Hooray!

Nothing else can so completely endear us to the present and the future as the excited arrival of a baby. But in the meantime, the comfort of the mother is of vast importance.

There is no endearing touch, such as "Mother Friend," which exerts a wonderful influence upon the expectant mother, and there is nothing which can be done for her greater pleasure than to make the period one of pleasant anticipation instead of apprehension.

Instead of a splendid letter from all the well-wishers, the best gift is the wonderful story told to their own daughters, of the state of motherhood, and the bottle of "Mother Friend" today of yesterday.
